What are the benefits of publishing your Open Access book with Bristol University Press?

BUP PUBLISHING AND OPEN ACCESS ETHOS

"The ethos of co-production within our international research teams straddling high-, middle- and low-income countries made Open Access publishing a natural decision. The results have been impressive – not only have total downloads far exceeded sales of paper copies but the geographical disaggregation of those downloads shows clearly how many people, particularly in low- and middle-income countries, would have been precluded from access by a paywall. COVID-19 lockdowns around the world have further underlined the global benefit of free downloads."

PROFESSOR OF DEVELOPMENT GEOGRAPHY, ROYAL HOLLOWAY, UNIVERSITY OF LONDON, UK.

OUR VISION

At Bristol University Press we believe that research should have as wide a reach as possible and be put to use in making a difference in supporting social change and social justice. Our Open Access books programme is part of our commitment to achieve this. Research has shown that Open Access publications have more citations, a wider readership and more online mentions than non-Open Access books and we wholeheartedly support it as a means to amplify social science perspectives for social good.

As a non-commercial University Press, we provide an ethical home for Open Access publications, offering fair and transparent fees, and valuing dissemination over profitability.

As a Press with a social mission, operating at the heart of the scholarly endeavour, we champion Open Access as a fairer and more equitable way of publishing research and reaching audiences globally. As a Press with a 25 year history of supporting academic communities we work to ensure a sustainable approach to Open Access that can help re-shape the scholarly communications landscape for years to come.

We published our first Open Access books in 2011 and have published nearly 70 books to date.
